

Problem Statement

While many homework management/submission apps like blackboard or dropbox exist. There are none websites that link together to make it easier to stay updated on homework and due dates.

Details:

In the short time I have been in computer engineering I have noticed how hard it is to keep up with classes. Blackboard, Dropbox, and Pearson are great applications and I understand why we use them but having so many websites to manage often makes it easier for me to forget to do certain assignments. I believe a solution would be to make a cloud website that links all of these smaller websites together. That way students can have an easy way of access all of their homework assignments and due dates without having to worry if they are missing something.